Komuniti terlibat projek ITTO perlu berfikiran terbuka, tidak terpengaruh pandangan luar

KUCHING: Komuniti terlibat dalam projek Pertubuhan Kayu Tropika Antarabangsa (ITTO) di negeri ini perlu sentiasa berfikiran terbuka dan tidak mudah terpengaruh dengan pandangan luar yang tidak memahami realiti pengurusan hutan serta perundangan di lapangan.

Perkara itu ditegaskan Pengarah Hutan Sarawak Datu Hamden Mohammad ketika berucap merasmikan Bengkel Pemuliharaan Berasaskan Komuniti 2025 di sini, kelmarin.

Bengkel itu dihadiri 66 peserta terdiri daripada komuniti yang terlibat dalam projek ITTO di Ulu Baram, Anap-Muput dan Ulu Mukah serta komuniti dari kawasan projek Pemidahan Fiskal Ekologi (EFT) di bawah seliaan Bahagian Hal Ehwal Antarabangsa Jabatan Hutan Sarawak (JHS).

Inisiatif lain dilaksanakan JHS ialah pengiktirafan Jawatankuasa Perwakilan Komuniti (CRC) serta pelaksanaan projek-projek pemulihan ekosistem dengan penglibatan aktif penduduk setempat, tambahnya.

SFD: Don't be swayed by uninformed views on forest conservation

KUCHING: Communities involved in forest conservation must remain open-minded and not be swayed by external views that do not understand the realities of on-the-ground forest management and legal frameworks, said Datu Hamden Mohammad.

The Sarawak Forest Department (SFD) director said communities must be strategic in charting their own course to safeguard their land, forests, and the future of the next generation.

"Communities must be wise in determining their own direction and be ready to adapt to the pace of development," he said in his opening address at the Community-Based Conservation Workshop 2025 held here on Monday.

The workshop brought together 66 participants from communities involved in International Tropical Timber Organisation (ITTO) projects in Ulu Baram, Anap-Muput and Ulu Mukah, as well as from areas under the Ecological Fiscal Transfer project area under the supervision of the SFD's International Affairs Division.

Also present were representatives from SFD and various relevant government agencies.

The workshop featured knowledge and experience-sharing sessions from representatives of various entities including officers from SFD, the chairman of Jagoi Heritage Association, manager of Kopel Kinabatangan, and head of Conservation at WWF-Malaysia, offering participants valuable insights into the community-based conservation approaches.

During the sessions, community leaders such as Tuai Rumah Jana from Anap-Muput and Ulu Mukah gave input on the benefits of collaborating with logging companies such as Zedtee Sdn Bhd, which contributes to forest sustainability and local economic development.

Meanwhile, Daud Sedin from Ba' Data Bila recounted the success of their community in obtaining various basic facilities as a result of close collaboration with the company and the Sarawak government.

The event also marked the official handover of three completed community projects in Ulu Baram, namely the Long Lamam Footpath, Lio Mato Footpath, and the improvement of the Ba' Muboi Gravity Water System.

These projects were fully completed in April this year as a result of the collaboration between SFD and ITTO.

The department said it remains committed to implementing social forestry and community development initiatives, including community training programmes, alternative economic development projects based on non-timber forest products, recognition of Community Representative Committees, and the implementation of ecosystem restoration projects with active participation of local residents.

It said through this inclusive approach, communities not only play a role as beneficiaries but also serve as strategic partners in the implementation of sustainable forest management.

SFD said the organisation of the workshop reflected the Sarawak government's continued commitment to empowering communities as key partners in forest conservation efforts, in line with the Sustainable Forest Management approach and the state's sustainable development aspirations.
